

Decumaria barbara

Climbing Hydrangea

Not truly a hydrangea, this is nevertheless a beautiful vine. The deep green foliage makes a lovely display climbing on an arbor or up a tree. The vine produces clusters of fragrant, tiny white flowers in spring. D. barbara prefers well-drained, moist soil in full shade to partial sun. The plants here at the arboretum have been somewhat drought-tolerant. Decumaria is a deciduous plant well worth having in the landscape.

Height and spread are variable.
